

1535

Henry VIII made himself head of the English church so that he could change the rules and divorce his wife. He also closed down monasteries and had the bible translated into English.