

MY DAY AT LEGOLAND

Last month my family and I went to Legoland as we wanted to have a fun day out at a theme park.

Early in the morning we boarded a train bound for Legoland. We had an early start so that we could spend the whole day having fun.

As the train was delayed a little we arrived shortly after the opening time and were surprised to see the long queue waiting to get in.

When we finally got in we were in for a few disappointments.

Firstly, we had to wait in a queue for the Pirate Ride for nearly an hour. When it was nearly our turn, the ride broke down. After another hour we finally got to have our ride.

Secondly, we found that we had to wait in a long queue for absolutely everything so we spent almost all of our days waiting in long crushes with other disgruntled people.

Then we also found that the queues for food were also astronomical so we decided to wait in another queue for another ride and have lunch later.

Finally, when the masses had moved away from the lunch queues there was very little food left so we did not have much choice.

Eventually it was closing time and time to go home - but there was one more disappointment. The last bus was scheduled to leave Legoland for the station half an hour before Legoland closed and another one was not due for at least an hour. That meant waiting in one crowd of restless people.

We were very disappointed with our day as we had spent almost all day standing in queues for only 6 rides. We set out to have a fun family day, but we ended up having such a stressful day that we were not very nice to each other at all by the end of it! Next time we want some quality time, we think we might try the local video store!
